Get ready to take down your opponents with our top picks from Pokémon TCG! We're exploring the most expensive full-art trainer cards you can get in this set. Don't worry if you're overwhelmed - we've got everything you need to build a tournament-winning deck. From powerful Tera Pokémon to essential Trainer cards, we'll guide you through the best options. First up is Flygon Ex, which brings some guerrilla tactics to harass your opponent's Pokémon. For just one Fighting Energy, you can deal 130 damage and swap in another Benched Pokémon. Then, with Water and Steel Energies, use its Sonic Peridot attack to take out each of your opponent's ex and V Pokémon - but be aware that mileage may vary depending on their deck. Next is Ceruledge Ex, which allows for some serious damage with Abyssal Flames, costing just one Fire Energy. While it only deals 30 damage at base level, it gets a power-up for each Energy card in your discard pile, dealing 20 more damage per Energy. It may take ten or more Energies to OHKO higher-HP Pokémon, but you can still take out lower-Hp ones with strategic attacks. Alolan Exeggutor ex is an absolute powerhouse that can accelerate the battlefield in your favor and disrupt your opponent's game plan - under the right circumstances, of course. While it's not as high on the tier list due to the set's many powerful cards. The Tropical Frenzy attack in Alolan Exeggutor ex deals 150 damage and lets you attack any number of Basic Energies from your hand to your team in any way you like. You can come in with Swinging Sphene for a win-win coin flip - if heads, the opponent's Active Basic Pokémon is Knocked Out; on tails, a Basic Pokémon from their Bench is out. Finally, Boss's Orders and Lisia's Appeal are incredibly important cards that manipulate the battlefield - but with a twist. Lisia's Appeal lets you switch out an opponent's Benched Basic Pokémon to the Active Spot, leaving it confused instead of Knocked Out. You can still disrupt an opponent's strategy with this card, even with all those Tera Pokémon around. Sparkling Scales prevents damage and effects from attacks by the opponent's Tera Pokémon. This gives you a chance to power up Milotic ex and deal moderate damage while putting the opponent's Pokémon to sleep. Sylveon ex has a unique strategy that focuses on Magical Charm, which deals 160 damage and reduces the next incoming attack by 100 damage. This makes it harder for the opponent to counterattack. Angelite is another card that can throw opponents off guard by forcing them to shuffle two of their Pokémon from the Bench back into their deck. Archaludon ex is a powerful defensive Pokémon with 300 HP, allowing you to accelerate Energy and deal solid damage while disabling Fire-type weaknesses. Megaton Blower is an Ace Spec Trainer card that wipes out all opponent's Pokémon Tools, Special Energy cards, and Stadiums, giving you a significant advantage on the board. Hydregion ex is a powerful Dark Tera Pokémon with two attacks: Crashing Headbutt and Obsidian. Its Surging Sparks attack deals 200 damage and forces your opponent to discard three cards from their hand. The real strength of their deck lies in Obsidian, which inflicts 130 points of damage on the Active Pokémon and an additional 130 points on two Benched Pokémon, totaling 390 points of damage. This allows you to either weaken the opponent's team or take three prize cards at once. Pikachu ex is one of the most valuable cards in Surging Sparks and stands out as a top choice due to its Resolute Heart ability. With this ability, Pikachu ex can withstand a single hit if it has full HP before the attack, allowing it to remain in play with only 10 HP. Once Pikachu ex survives, you can counterattack with Topaz Bolt, which deals massive 300 damage but requires discarding three Energy cards.
